Public Procurement And Multilateral Development Banks: Law, Practice And Problems

Synopsis

Author Sope Williams-Elegbe analyzes, compares and contrasts the legal, practical, and institutional approaches to procurement regulation in the World Bank, the Inter-American Development Bank, the African Development Bank, the Asian Development Bank and the European Bank for Reconstruction and Development. These multilateral development banks cumulatively channel billions of dollars annually in development assistance to borrower countries. This money is usually spent through processes that incorporate the public procurement regulations of the banks, and it is often a condition of this finance that the funds must be spent using the procurement regulations of the lender institution. A thorough study is made of the issues and challenges raised by procurement regulation in multilateral development banks. The book examines the history of procurement regulation in the banks; the tripartite relationship created between the banks, borrowers and contractors in funded procurements; the procurement documents and procurement cycle; as well as how the banks ensure competition and value for money in funded procurements. The banks' approach to sustainability concerns in public procurement, such as environmental, social, or industrial concerns; as well as how the banks address the issue of corruption and fraud in funded contracts, is discussed. This book shows how these banks have undertaken steps to harmonize their policies and practices, increased borrower procurement capacity, taken steps to reduce the tying of aid, and play an important role in the reform of borrower procurement systems, all in an effort to improve the effectiveness of development finance. It also considers the contractual and other remedies that are available to parties that may be aggrieved as a result of a funded procurement.
