Not By Chance! Shattering The Modern Theory Of Evolution

Synopsis

Physicist Dr. Lee M. Spetner's new book has biologists and geneticists across the country praising this book as one of the most serious challenges to the modern theory of evolution. "Dr. Spetner has an extraordinary ability to present complex mathematical, statistical, and biological issues in a comprehensible manner."--Rabbi Joseph Elias, The Jewish Observer "It is certainly the most rational attack on evolution that I have ever read"--Professor E. Simon, Department of Biology, Purdue University Spetner received the Ph.D. degree in physics from MIT in 1950.

Excellent science and explanation that deals with NeoDarwinTheory (NDT) (Synthesis). It deals with chance and probability through his personal research and those of others specific to the three postulates that NDT sets out.

I think I grasped the gist of the book, even though English is my second language. A lot of the content is very science-oriented, so it is quite difficult to read. I hope his second book on evolution, "The Evolution Revolution", is a better read to me as I am now used to his style due to reading the first book.

hard to keep up with but a good reference and refutation of modern evolution.

Excellent read!

Evolution is a fancy word for randomness. How can a kidney evolve? The engineering of the kidney is more complicated than fifty George Washington bridges. Did the George Washington bridge evolve? A resounding NO. The George Washington bridge was planned by a designer. Evolution is the biggest hoax ever. The double irony is that we live in the twenty-first century, and science is advanced, and still, most people believe in evolution! It's off the wall. Nothing evolved. Nothing was created by chance. The world was planned and created by Intelligent Design. Read this fine book and study it carefully.

This is a most useful and interesting critique of the Neo-Darwinian Synthesis, and it is hard to know where Darwinists have been all these years maintaining a position that, as Spetner points out, always defied common sense. Perhaps, just for that reason, the need to undo common sense with biological dogma under educational stress, the persistence of Darwinism has rendered everyone a theoretical cripple. One must caution that no argument is yet without flaws, and the injection of new thinking about information by Spetner is as important as it is still incomplete. But the argument, without providing a full alternative, can help to provide a new foundation of 'theoretical self-repair' after the protestant reformation of the Darwin religion. Spetner's controversial somewhat speculative notions at the end about environmental induction of variation must constitute the last straw for Darwinists leary of Lamarck but this new perspective has a funny rightness to it, however much we still have to learn. Excellent, though perhaps too short.

After the works of men of different persuasions such as H. Morris, J. Morris, D. Gish, K. Ham, J. Sarfati, R. Humphreys, J. Baumgardner, M. Behe, W. Gitt, W. Dembski, J. Wells, G. Gonzalez, P. Johnson, M. Denton, R. Milton, and L. Spetner, the least we can say is that neo-Darwinism is in real trouble.<sup>1)</sup> Most of the icons of evolution have been debunked<sup>2)</sup> Mutations and natural selection can't generate complex specified information<sup>3)</sup> The metaphysical naturalism behind neo-darwinism has been exposed<sup>4)</sup> The links are still missing, both in the fossil record and in molecular biology<sup>5)</sup> Evidence for design and fine tuning is overwhelming, as even some evolutionists seem recognize (v.g. "designoids
