I Love Walking in France

The Coast of Brittany from Camaret-sur-Mer to Audierne

Synopsis

2017 EDITION Everything you need to know to plan a long-distance walk from Camaret-sur-Mer to Audierne following the GR 34 along the coast of Brittany in France. From rugged headlands and dramatic cliffs, to swathes of dancing wildflowers, wide sandy beaches and quaint fishing ports – this 160-kilometre (100-mile) walk along the coast of Brittany has it all! Most of this walk follows a gentle route – there is very little strenuous climbing and, on a sunny day with a gentle breeze, I would rate this (and continuing along the GR 34 to Lorient) as my favourite walk in France! Many times during my journey, I found myself sitting on a rock, admiring the view – unable to believe the world could be this beautiful! Brittany is a holidaymakers' paradise – you will find that you are never very far from a campground, sailing or surf school and I imagine that, during the summer months, campsites will be hard to find unless you book in advance. When I visited in May, it was much quieter – the weather was quite unpredictable (as is often the case during spring in France) and on weekdays, I was mostly alone on the path. Sunday afternoons, however, were a different story and I found myself sharing the path with hundreds of others! The perfect way to approach this walk is to carry a tent, check the weather each day and walk as far or as little as feels comfortable. And if you are an experienced and sure-footed walker, I can think of no more glorious way to spend a week or two! Melinda's guidebook provides all the information you will need to plan a walk that suits your budget and walking style, from hotels and campgrounds (with internet links) to bus timetables, market days and festivals, maps and distances between villages. There are practical tips including what to pack, how to arrange luggage transfers and a list of French phrases so you can confidently book a room, order dinner, follow directions and speak to the taxi driver.
